Address—The Northern Monthly,

paid. He was opposed to that and hoped the electors would show their disapproval at the polls on Wednesday.

Mr. Preston congratulated the people of Napanee for one thing anyway, and it was that they were now taking an interest in school matters. It would be an impossibility to get such a meeting as this together some years ago. He did not know exactly what the public expected him to say this evening. While he had been school trustee he had endeavored to make the schools more efficient. Fault had been found that a large number of pupils did not pass last midsummer. He did not know how the board were to be held responsible for that. It was between the pupils and the teachers. The papers, he heard, were difficult. But what had the board to do with that. It is also said the salaries should not have been increased. The board thought it was in the interest of the school to advance the salaries of four teachers. These had to be specialists, and were somewhat difficult to obtain. They found it difficult to get people to fill these positions with teachers who had a record, and did not want to be left without teachers. The question was put to the teachers therefore whether they intended to remain, and were met with a request for higher salaries. The board understood the principal Mr. Henry was offered $1500 per year to go elsewhere. Inducements were also held out to another teacher to go elsewhere. The salaries were therefore increased. This was the difficulty they had to face. Either break up the staff or advance the salaries. He thought it would be conceded that it was a difficult task to obtain fit teachers. They believed they had an excellent staff, equal to any in the province. It is stated that a janitor was engaged at a hundred dollars a year more than was necessary. He was not aware of such being the case. He was paid $260 per year. The janitor in Deseronto gets a dollar a day the year round. He did not think the board could be unfavorably criticised for paying no more than is paid in other schools near. In Deseronto they did not think they were doing wrong when the principal's salary was increased to $1400. As to the public schools, a very small advance had been made in salaries, and were merited. The salaries at which some of the ladies were engaged was certainly small, being from $225 to $300. A high school teacher was more difficult to obtain than a public school teacher. The position of a high school trustee was not a remunerative one so far as he was concerned. In answer to a question Mr. Preston said the teachers were engaged before the result of the late examinations were known.

Mr. Herrington said it was rather a humiliating confession for a trustee to make that he did not know what this meeting was called for. He was not present to go into personalities, but was a candidate on principles: He was a candidate in the West Ward, and was asked some days ago if he was in accord with the present school board. He said he was not. He was not fighting Mr. Preston only. The present elections were only the beginning of the end. In turn all the trustees could be opposed. It was surprising to see how with one accord they were all helping each other now. They knew what was on foot. It had been said of himself that he could not qualify as school trustee. If the electors would see to his election he would see that the qualification was all right. The high school when proposed was to have been built for $12,000. It has cost somewhere about $26,000. When the new building was proposed it was stated that a saving on salaries could be effected. The saving is this way—$3400 was paid in salaries in the old school, in the new one the salaries are $4900. He had written a few questions, and desired that they might be answered:

QUESTIONS.

Read the minutes of the Board of Education of the following meetings:

The meetings immediately prior to the last mass meeting.

The meeting at which the teachers' salaries were raised.

The minutes of the meeting at which Mr. Lang was granted an extra $100.

The minutes of the meeting at which the Secretary's salary was raised.

Did Mr. Hall, and Mr. Morden at the mass meeting state in reply to a question asked by Capt. Holmes that the new building could be completed for $12,000?

How much did it cost?

How much more will it cost to seat it as it is proposed to seat it in the upper storey?

Did the board state at the last mass meeting that the increase in the revenue of the Collegiate Institute would equal the increase in the expenditure or in other words that the new building would be self-sustaining?

not received more than $23,000. He claimed the town council did not pay over to the board the money they should have done. He thought when charges were made against them of being extravagant that some comparison should be made between different schools. Compared with Newburgh high school the cost per pupil was lower in Napanee than in Newburgh. Then they had Deseronto, and here again the average cost per pupil was higher than in Napanee. Some people think the high school trustees spend nearly all their taxes when in fact more money is spent on streets than on the high school. School boards labor under severe difficulties in keeping up a staff of competent teachers. With regard to the salary of the secretary, it was raised to $150. He got none of that money, although he acted for Mr. Curlette while he was sick. So far as the cost of each pupil in attendance, he claimed Napanee was very low. In building the Napanee school the trustees thought it was better to put up a large building at once, so that it might do for years, and be able to give accommodation sufficient for the whole county. It was a question, it seemed to him, whether the schools should be maintained in a state of efficiency or whether a retrograde movement was to now begin. Mr. Jamieson said he had listened to what had been said, and had come to the conclusion that twelve men equal to the school board would be hard to find. He moved that the meeting express their full confidence in the board, and thank them for past services. Mr. Wright seconded the motion. The motion carried.
Mr. Gibbard was rather opposed to the school board grant, but having seen the building he was better satisfied.
Mr. McCay was next heard by request. He said he did not come to speak. He did not call the meeting, and did not know how it was called. When the new building was proposed he said $12,000 was not enough. At the time when the $6,000 was asked for, Mr. Symington moved that they be granted $8,000. Time has showed that the $8,000 would not be enough. The building was not completed yet. Mr. Easton, as treasurer, had only $30, and Mr. Curlette, as secretary, $50. But when Mr. Easton would not allow the board to overdraw, he was dismissed, and Mr. Curlette given $150. He was as much in favor of good schools as anybody, and was in favor of economy also.
Mr. Pruyn said he felt somewhat hard toward the school board. The board had not kept faith with the public. That was what he had against the board. The board said they should be judged by results, and to his mind the results did not justify a raise of salaries, but the raise was made. He was always willing to advance the cause of education, as far as his means would permit, but this board certainly had been extravagant, and he was prepared to help put them out.
Mr. Aylsworth said he believed the trustees had not made fair representations to the public. That they had deceived the town council and the ratepayers.
Mr. Madole said he had been told by the board that $12,500 would finish the building and equip the school, and that was the reason he voted for the expenditure.
A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Deroche for his impartial conduct in the chair.
Mr. Deroche said the mistakes of the board, if any, were errors of judgment, and hoped more interest would be taken in school matters in the future. No dollar was better expended than that in the education of the youth of the county.

In what way were the tenders asked for?
Was the matter ever brought before the committee? If so, when?
Is it true that the Chairman of the Board does the printing for the board and receives pay for it?

Is it true that Mr. Thos. Henry, a member of the board, supplies stationery and other supplies to the school?

When the board asked for the additional $6,000 did they not assure the Town Council again that that sum would complete the building?

After getting the two grants of $12,000 and $6,000, from what source and by what means was the balance raised?

Mr. Morden followed and said it argued well for the future of the town to see such a meeting. It was to him a matter of congratulation to see people taking an interest in school matters. It was true they had a fine school building, and that it had cost a deal of money. They were no doubt a great spending department. They had sixteen teachers to pay and three janitors. They were dealing with the most costly element in the town. The cheapest teacher was said by the late Dr. Ryerson to be the best teacher. It was easy to say they had spent $50,000 in three years. It was easy to get off a little cheap wit about the expenditure. It was true they had said the building would cost only $12,000. Their architect had said it could be built for that sum. The board of trustees had to pay their taxes, and for the purpose for which they were elected there was not twelve more responsible or able men. He did not know why he should now have to go back and explain things that had been settled some time ago. He had been animated all along by a desire to have good schools. He thought the schools were of more importance than the streets, and he had acted on that principle, and if the public did not think so, he was willing to step down and out. With regard to Mr. Fessenden and Mr. Henry, he did not think the present principal was worth more than the last one. It was not the fault of the school board that Mr. Fessenden left. He never asked for a raise of salary. The present staff started in with small salaries, on the understanding of getting a raise. Last year they asked for a raise, and were put off. This year they asked before the vacation, and threatened to leave unless a raise was granted. The board therefore had to come to a decision. The salaries were raised and the board did what was right. He was prepared to stand by that action now, and vindicate the action of the board. Mr. Morden also spoke as to the public schools. With regard to the Henry's on the board and the Henry teacher, the trustee Henry's were not responsible for Mr. Henry being on the teaching staff. Mr. Morden was recommended by Mr. Fessenden. He, the speaker, was not responsible for his being here. Everything the board had done was done because they thought it was right. Mr. Morden claimed that it was an "accident" that the examinations here last summer were not successes. The year before this school had fair success. It was true that Mr. Fessenden did well both here and in Peterborough. He generally did well. The scholars from this school when away from home had all made good showing. The gentlemen who are arraigned here to-night had brought a college to their doors. He paid his school taxes, and he would like to know how much the person who dictated the questions read paid. He had tried to exercise more economy with public money than with his own, and he was willing to pay his share of the expenses of good schools. He was anxious to put his own case before the ratepayers. Personally he was always ready to step down in favour of Mr. Deroche if they really want a good man. At this point Mr. Ham said he was willing to let Mr. Deroche be returned. Mr. Lapum said he was willing to do so also. Mr. Morden then spoke for the defence of the other members of the board, and claimed they had not been extravagant. He would leave the board with the consciousness that he had always done his duty up to the level of his abilities.

Mr. Ham said it was not necessary for him to take up their time, as he understood it was agreed between Mr. Morden and himself that both were to retire in favour of Mr. Deroche.

Mr. Deroche said this arrangement took him somewhat by surprise. He was not anxious to be a trustee, but if so doing would settle the feud, he was willing to accept. This arrangement was concluded by agreement, and the election in Centre Ward settled.

Mr. Hall said he could not appear before such a meeting as this without some preparation with regard to figures. He went over the figures and claimed the board had Reflections of a Gilded Youth.

"What isn't," he mused, "that makes life worth the living?
Is it endless receiving and spending, or giving?
Is it jolliness, gingerbread, horses and racks;
Having funnies to drop in all possible slots?
Is it bustle and get there, the genius for trade
And commercial combines, by which fortunes are made?"

I never liked that. Was it luck or mishap?
That a fortune without it fell into my lap?
A bowlful of size has been rolled to the crown
Of a hill, I can start it and let it roll down
If you set a great trap and within my reach bring it,
No doubt I can jump on the bait-plate and spring it.

But the question keeps pressing what fellows gets caught—Whose legs the trap shuts on—who is it that's bought?

I'm not sure, but at odd times I own I opine
That the limbs that I see held so firmly are mine!

"Must I keep to the end of the chapter. I wonder,
This purposeless life of a gilded wander?
Is it really a good gift that snatches away
The motives for labor and substitutes play?
The fellows that do things and are things attain
Their lead by hard discipline seasoned with pain;
Their character grows by the sort of endeavour
That sizes on time as a slice of forever.
It begins just a little to get through my head
Why the grave Sere of Galilee meant what he said
To that opulent youth who disliked his advice
And went off disconcerted to pause and think twice.
If the spirit's the man, what in thunder's the use
Of indulging the senses with pains so profuse,
If the more you indulge them the harder it is For the spirit to get what is lawfully his?"

"Not the best belted drag can keep up very far
With a tuppenny cart that is hitched to a star.
Having fun with one's money's a good thing to do,
But how about letting it have fun with you?
Mind shall serve, or possess; and unless I can keep
My place sound and upward, on top of my heap,
I vow that by way my defeat to acknowledge I'll dump the whole pile on a Methodist college."

London Fashion Notes.

One picks up many a hint for dress at the theatres. For instance, anybody who wishes to know exactly how the fashionable skirt hangs should go and see Mrs. Langtry as Agatha Tylden. The artists in the illustrated fashion papers are not yet up to date either in this matter or the fashionable way of doing the hair. At the Trafalgar Square Theatre, one of the prettiest and most becoming in London, the other evening there were noticed several smartly dressed women in the stalls. One, a brunette, had a very pretty evening cloak of pale pink cloth, made with three little collars, all of them bordered with brown fur. Her dark hair was arranged in a large coil at the back of the head, and perpendicularly across the center of it was fastened a very handsome diamond ornament about six inches long.

Phrynette and Pierrot,
He stood beneath her casement dim,
Simple Pierrot!
Phrynette looked out and smiled at him,
"Bonjour, Pierrot!"
Twas but a word, a flower she wore,
And he's her's for evermore;
And whoso'er his steps may go,
He hears he'll call "Bonjour, Pierrot!"
So time ran on, and they were wed,
Simple Pierrot!
The sun shone blessings on his head,
Happy Pierrot!
And happily he lived all day,
"Phrynette is watching, she would say;
And life went by with happy flow;
"Sweetheart Phrynette!" "Sweetheart Pierrot!"

But once he came; he climbed the stair
Happy Pierrot!
He knows Phrynette is waiting there,
Happy Pierrot!
But ah! the nest is dark and lone,
His bird has gone, Phrynette has flown!
Only these words: "Forgive, forget,
Good-bye, Pierrot, forgive Phrynette!"

Hark, hark, the drum! The trumpets blow!
The battle calls, and he will go;
For what is life when love is o'er?
Phrynette!—Phrynette is his no more!
And what of all her broken vows?
Too late, too late, she loves him now!
Too late to weep, too late to regret,
Pierrot is dead! "Good-bye, Phrynette!"

Tennyson as a Religious Teacher.

Let fools and sensualists say what they will, it is the glory of Browning and Tennyson that in an age which so much prurient literature has defiled with the empoised honey of French realism, they did not grope in the foul abysses of human degradation, but ever lifted their eyes to the true grandeur of humanity crowned with spiritual fire.

The poets have made life brighter, happier, more hopeful to us by teaching us to see, and what to see, and how to see; by opening our minds to the true, our eyes to the beautiful; by opening our ears to the voices of the mountain and the sea; by quickening our sensibility to the sweet influences of the fields and of the ocean. A thousand things which we should have never noticed, in which we should have never read God's autographs of beauty and of blessing. Tennyson has now taught us to observe with delight and love—the black nubs in spring; the rosy plumlets which tuft the larch; the pure green streaks on the white leaves of the snowdrop; the gummy chestnut buds which glisten in the April blue; the sea wind singing shrill, chill with flakes of foam; the liquid azure bloom of the sea; the Pleiades glittering like fire in a silver braid; the little pink, five-beaded baby soles; the light feet which tread on the daisies make the meadows rosy; the dragon-fly's sapphire flash of living light; the river sloping to plunge in cataract, shattering on black blocks its breath of thunder.

Myriad of rivulets hurrying through the land,
The moan of deters in immemorial elms,
And murmur of innumerable waves.

picture with her great shining hazel eyes and black brows, her full red lips, and the faultless teeth that flashed with white light in the dark countenance where the rare red only now and then blossomed—a tall and superb young creature, whose health and vitality and lustrous completely wiped out the whole mental photograph of poor May and Mary and Maria.

"Gracious!" said Honor to her gentle cousin, Marian Marcy. "Don't talk of him! He's married all to pieces. So you suppose I will take a fragment of a husband. Am I going to make one of a harem? What does papa mean? The idea of my marrying an old man like that!"

Poor Mr. Chipperley was only 45, but such is the point of view of youth that 45 was all the same to her as 145.

"I don't care if he is made of money!" cried Honor. "He looks as if he were—of old bank bills."

"Old bank bills," said Marian, "make a fine, you know, almost as splendid as precious stones."

"He hasn't reached the slag stage. The fancy of his daring to send me roses!" as her cousin opened for her a box that had just come in. "Put them all back in the box, Maddy, right away; I won't touch one of them!"

"But, Honor, look at these great beauties—an armful—the stems more than half a yard long. Why, they cost a dollar and a half apiece."

"I don't care if they cost a fortune apiece. Wear his roses, indeed! I'd rather have a green leaf of Ted's picking. Here, Pinky, take them away; throw them out, every one!"

"What a gorgeous twenty-five-dollar breast-plot Pinky will wear out with her best young man to-night. I hope Mr. Chipperley will see her then. Make haste back, Pinky; you must have the rose-red chiffon out presently—there! I declare what can papa be thinking of, not only to be willing I should accept that old Mormon, but to want me to! Why, I might as well go out to Utah where they drive their wives forty abreast, and be done with it!"

"But, at any rate, Mr. Chipperley has the decency to drive his wives tandem."

"No, he hasn't. The law compels him. Oh, you make me shiver!" she exclaimed, with a quick shudder, as she turned over the laces and ribbons in the drawer before her. "The idea of going tandem with three ghosts! Poor ghosts—poor dead women! They must have lost all identity by this time. Mrs. Chipperley—Mrs. Theodore Chipperley—what of them—all of them—none of them? And to be a fourth, and put on their name! I should feel that I was putting on their shroud! Oh, oh, oh, I hate the ground he walks on!"

"And less the ground Ted dances on."

"Poor Ted! Poor Ted! Oh, Maddy, what does make all the inequality? That horrid Chipperley man with millions, and Ted, the delightful, the original, the good, the brilliant Ted, without a penny to his name!"

"Mr. Chipperley has been brilliant enough to make a fortune."

"Well, he may keep it," smoothing out a Honiton flounce. "I don't want it."

"As if you could do without a fortune. Honor, you who have always had so many luxuries that you don't know what the necessities are. Look at that flounce—"

"I know it. I should never have another inch of real lace if I married Ted. And—well—will you tell me, Maddy, why Ted doesn't say anything? I can't ask a man to marry me—"

"You! Well, for a demure little cat that likes to look at a king you would take a part in a tabby show," said Honor, folding away the flounce, and leaning both round elbows among the rings and pins of the toilet cushions, while she looked at a dark and beautiful siren in the glass. "I shall never forget, Maddy, how you went and took your mother's necklace on my mother's neck. I think that did papa good to the core of his heart. And when mamma got over being startled she always rather admired you for it. Only she will be even with you some day." And then she fell to tying bows and snipping ribbons with twinkling fingers. "I should make a capital milliner if—oh, well, Ted does everything except say the word."

"How can he say the word? What would he do with a wife? Just think, Honor! Why, he'd be a wretch if he did speak! A man with no more possibilities than Ted and with so many attractions, ought not to come where you and Helen and Teresa and the rest are—you butterflies who have only fed on the roses and lain in the lilies of life."

"Marian, you are just an old maid, a puritanic, conscientious, cantankerous old maid! There—don't you think these little lavender and mignonette bows add to the butterfly appearance of this particular butterfly?"

"You are perfectly hopeless, Honor. You forget there is a future. You just dance in the beam to-day. Your father's interest in the Humphreys estate dies with him. It's a big interest to-day; but it reverts to the co-residues, and all that his children inherit is the nice little family quarrel that has given the General occupation ever since lawyers and Surrogates and the rest ate up the whole of your mother's fortune and a parcel of most expensive tastes and habits. And here is Mr. Chipperley—a nice young man—"

"Old Chipperley!" dropping the scarf over her hair, while Marion colored and coughed.

"Young—ah—comparatively," stammered Marian.

"Twice my age, at all events," trying the scarf with a bewitching knot.

"A worthy gentleman!" exclaimed Marian, the color still enlivening her fair cheek, "against whom there is nothing to be said, and who offers an antenuptial settlement of a million dollars. And you have been out three years, and have let Ted keep every eligible man away. And your father feels his life insecure—and you've all lived so at the top of the wave that there won't be a dollar left the day after his funeral."

"Marian Marcy" turning to her with a diamond stick pin in each hand. "How can you talk so? My dear old father! How can you be so indelicate, so, so cruel!"

"I hope you're not going to stab me. I am not cruel. I am speaking for your good—"

"Great good!" with half a sob and half a laugh. "I shall have a hysterical if you don't take care!" and the eyes were flaming and the teeth flashing.

"Have twenty if you want to." And Marian stood up beside her and looked her in the face with steady gray eyes that had a steady point behind their dewy softness. "When it comes to the point," she said, "and you are married to a poor man, and your mother and Helen and Teresa and the boys are homeless and penniless, do you believe you won't regret Mr. Chipperley?"

"What a mercy it would be, Maddy, if you were struck dumb."

Marian laughed. "I'm not sorry," she said, "because your temper shows that you are beginning to listen to reason. You marry Ted to-day and have a happy year or two; and presently you are shabby; and presently care and anxiety about making bricks without straw have taken off your bloom and given your face lines; you go nowhere—no balls and dinners and operas for you with nothing to wear; you grow irritable; he finds other places pleasanter than home; he reproaches you; you cry; you reproach, he goes off. And you are more lucky than I think you'll be if you settle into anything like tolerable content with him at last, if you don't leave him and go off and earn your living as a milliner or a lady's maid."

"Marian!"

"But you marry Mr. Chipperley—you have, possibly, a bad quarter of an hour, regretting a handsome face and a dashing manner. But you meet with absolute devotion, you tread on rose leaves and eat and drink nectar and ambrosia, and wear purple and fine linen, you have your palaces, your horses, your servants, and your path through life is a perfect milky way of diamonds."

"I never knew you could be so eloquent, Marian."

"And the long and the short of it is that you become accustomed to the way in which your husband surrounds you with sweet observances, and you are grateful to him and have a friendly feeling for the rest of your life; and that is about all you would come out on in the end if you had married your ideal."

"And you leave out all the companionship, the oneness, the—"

"Three uncommonly nice women have found companionship with Mr. Chipperley very satisfying."

"Yes, they had all they wished of it early and left for parts unknown. Oh, how bored they must have been!"

"Bored! With Mr. Chipperley!"

"I believe that you are in love with that man yourself, Maddy!"

"Well, now, Honor, I've said all I had to say. If you think it over seriously and remember that all this time Ted hasn't whispered a word—"

"Oh, yes, he has—whispered—a plenty."

"He hasn't spoken out."

"And not to do that?"

"Is very unmanly."

"And if he had?"

"It would be very scoundrelly."

"Marian Marcy, I'll never speak to you again!"

"Till next time," said Marian, as she left the room. "There!" she murmured, as the door closed, "I believe I've said every word my uncle asked me to say."

And Honor burst into tears, tore off her lace scarf, and hid her face in it, and snatched it away, conscious in the midst of her trouble that every tear was a spot upon the ribbons, and sobbed out to the image of herself in the mirror: "Oh! oh! I am so afraid I shall be tempted into marrying Mr. Chipperley!" And she rummaged out a photograph of Ted from a chaos of sachets and heads and ribbons and laces, and looked at it magnified and halved through the mist of her tears; and then she had to bathe her eyes in the hot water and then in cold, and to powder the lids, and to pale them, by comparison, with a little rouge upon her cheeks, before Pinky returned and clothed her in the gown the color of the heart of a damask rose, in which she went off to dinner, where she was to meet Mr. Chipperley, who hated the color of the heart of a damask rose.

Mr. Chipperley's wives had all been pallid women, dressing in pallid colors. One or two of them would have liked to wear a grass-green gown, or one even of sea blue; one, more daring than the rest, had appeared in a primrose-colored silk, but it aroused such uncomfortable remarks that she only wore it once. No soft grays and mauves were the only wear for them; and now when their likeness rose on his memory, the only distinct thing about it, were the fawns and drabs of their garments. Those, too, as delicate eyebrows had merged into dark positive lines, as blue eyes had become gray and now darted forth hazel gleams, were swiftly suffused with hazel and pink and glowing purple. And he felt as though he had forbidden it, and May and Mary and Maria were wearing these colors in spite of his expressed will. It had the effect of unmarring him, more than death itself; and he was decidedly displeased with himself to find that he was more wildly and passionately in love with this brilliant creature in her burning reds and yellows than he had been with all his tender little pearl-gray and indistinct wives put together. It seemed to Mr. Chipperley that he had been an indistinct man himself till now; he found himself growing to the measure of his love; he had had to stoop before; now he must climb; this gorgeous, glowing young woman was like a light in the sky; one must aspire to her, not stoop; that was a new sensation. She spoke of politics; and the kingdoms of the earth made new combinations, and the destinies of nations rearranged themselves. She talked a little theosophy—he felt this world enlarged to all the borders of the vast unknown. She spoke of a sympathy; he entered into the secrets of music that he had not dreamed existed. She sang, and he knew how the trumpets on heaven's ramparts sound. Yet she knew next to nothing of politics or theosophy or music; he rose only to the demands of his imagination concerning her. If sometimes he found the exercise a little wearisome, there was Marian's gentle denseness to fall back on and find restful.

One thing, however, concerning Honor, he had not yet learned how to explain, and hardly to endure. How could she love animals in the way she did? Four great Persian cats haunted her every footstep in the house; there they lay on their cushions in the drawing room, in the music room, in the library; a sleepy snowy creature like some half-animated ostrich plume; a satanic black thing with fiery eyes that to Mr. Chip-

It is in your power, with the settle-ments I call for, to make their condi-tion all that it has been."

"That is to say, you sell me and my happiness for their ease and comfort. It is pleasant to know which you care for the most. It leaves me quite free. No, Mr. Papa Humphreys, you needn't promise to deliver what you can't get hold of! You will have to go very long, indeed on this particular block! I heard De Fuy say once it was a good plan to go short on a rising market!" And just then the name of Mr. Theodore Dane was announced, and the father's eyes flashed fire at the daughter, and the daughter's eyes flashed fire in return, and Cousin Marian was not the only one who knew how much Mr. Theodore Dane had to do with the fortune of Honor."

"Oh," said Honor to Marian, when this conversation and struggle with her father had been reported, and summed up with her mother's dark hints that supplies should be cut off, that she should be sent into the country or shut up in her room till she promised different fashions, and balanced against her own declaration that medieval customs were impossible in this fin de siecle period—"Oh," said Honor, "if I could only dress you in my clothes and make you pass for me, and marry you off to Mr. Chipperley, how I should like it!"

"And I, too," said the poor Marian. "Marian! Could you really endure the thought of marrying that man, for one instant?"

"What an idiot I should be if I couldn't!"

Honor looked at her a moment, large-eyed and silent. "Marian Marcy!" she cried then. "You shall! You shall marry Mr. Chipperley, you shameless dear!"

"How strangely fate moves," said Honor to her mother a little later. "Here is Marian Marcy, pale and drab, just like all the women he naturally prefers, wearing pale and drab gowns, thinking pale and drab thoughts, doing pale and drab things—exactly the one Mr. Chipperley ought to marry—she would melt into that composite wife of his without a wrinkle. And here he is possessed to marry one who sets all his ideals at defiance, whose whims and ways will eventually drive him mad, whose colors will startle him blind, who will be as much a blight on his life as strong sun on tender grass."

"I never heard such indelicate and improper remarks from a young girl's mouth before. Marian think of marrying Mr. Chipperley when he has not asked her!"

"My goodness! Oh, my goodness!" cried Honor, teeth and eyes flashing out of that brown face in one dazzle of light along with her ringing laugh. "Oh!" she cried, running from the room, "if I died the next minute I shall have had my share of satisfaction! I mean to make Marian do the one thing in her life that shall be neither pale nor drab!"

But if Marian was a timid and conventional person in the main, she had more than once proved herself capable of rising to the occasion, and certainly she was doing something unusual and daring when uninvited she took Ted Dane's arm one night as he stood, rather dark and down of face, leaning against a window, and walked with him into Mrs. Roberts's orchid house. "Oh, there is Honor," she said, as they paused where a swarm of rosy flower-butterflies fluttered in their faces. "Is it not wicked that such a girl should be sacrificed?"

"Should be sold!" said Ted, suddenly, beaming on her, with his blue eyes shining and his manner for the first time showing, as he bent from his lofty height, that there was an unexpectedly delightful person in that Humphreys family. "It is infamous."

"I dare say he would make a very good husband."

"He ought. He has had enough experience in the line."

"Then I should think he'd see how very unfit he is."

"Unfit? For that beggar? No, no; Chipperley's a good fellow—but there's no one good enough for her."

"At any rate, she doesn't love him."

"She doesn't? Look at her, then!" gazing at Honor down a vista, where she stood gracefully extending her hand like some young queen with Mr. Chipperley bending over it like some seigneur swearing fealty.

"Very well. They are obliging her. It isn't worth while for her to quarrel perley's perception were inflamed with the very bottomless flames; another like a golden-fleece, fawning, caressing, half human; and a little mouse-colored imp, whose bounds and springs and feathery tail-lashings not only did infinite damage among the Venetian and Dresden knick-knackerie, but among Mr. Chipperley's nerves. And Mr. Chipperley hated cats. They gave him nausea; they made him sneeze; he had an indescribable antipathy to them; he was, as Honor said to Marian, afraid of them. He schooled himself to lay a very gingerly hand on the white one, feeling a chill up and down his spine as he did so; to suffer the yellow one to rub against his shoe, although that also made his flesh creep; he said nothing about certain scratches given him by the little gray Astarte devil, as he called it, for Honor's eye was on him; but when the black Asmodeus looked him in the face, Mr. Chipperley quailed. Then, too, there was a great buff-bodied and black-muzzled mastiff, and a spitz and a poodle, and goodness knows what else; a parrot, an owl no bigger than your fist, a little silken marmosette. Sometimes when Mr. Chipperley saw her, in a gown the hue of a pomegranate, with her cats in her arms or on her chair, and her dogs fawning around her, he had a moment of such feeling as he might have had were she Circe and he another lover just undergoing the enchantment and about to become one of them himself.

"Well, it's of no use," Circe had said. "He admires the colors he hates; he caresses the cats he fears; he loves the dogs he detests. It does look as if he were hypnotized. Can't I undo the spell?"

"You talk like a silly girl," said her father. "Mr. Chipperley does you the honor to make you a proposal of marriage."

"A proposal? Twenty proposals!" And I wish you, I order you, I command you to accept it." And Gen. Humphreys looked at her with eyes accustomed to command gleaming from the shadow of a pair of brows like epaulets that gave a military force to his glance. But his daughter had seen that glance before and knew just how much it meant.

"The Humphreys, papa," said the young rebel, "have not been in the habit of being commanded. I should hardly like to break the family traditions."

"You are a disobedient and insolent girl!"

"Nor have the Humphreys been bought and sold in the past—do you think I will be the first one placed upon the market? I wouldn't marry Mr. Chipperley if he were made of diamonds and set in the sky."

"I don't know how you could in that case," said her father. "But you know, without any more word about it, what the circumstances of the case are, what is likely to become of your mother and the rest of the children at my death, and that have. "Forced! Who can force her?" "Father, mother, a whole household. And break her heart."

"Has she an heart?" biting his moustache as if he meant it an injury.

"Heart? Honor Humphreys! she—well, you are the last person to deny it!"

"What have I to do with it?"

"Oh, certainly—if you have been meaning nothing"—frightened into the propriety she had forsaken in her desire to help both Honor and herself.

"Meaning nothing? I? What do you mean?" exclaimed Ted, suddenly facing her. "You know I am meaning something! You know I love Honor with all my heart and soul. You know I would spend my life for her! You know I haven't a dollar in the world!"

"I know she loves you, whether you have a dollar in the world or not!" And the next instant Ted Dane, in a thoughtless, breathless ecstasy, had clasped Marian to his heart for one swift second. On such an avowal it was impossible not to embrace some one.

"Oh, Marian," he said, "you are the best friend a man ever had."

"No, no, no!" she gasped, pink with her blushes. "What do you do such a thing for? Oh, I am sure Mr. Chipperley saw you!"

"What if he did? What do I care for Chipperley? Oh, Marian, you have made me the happiest man in the world!" And Mr. Chipperley, whom some dancing fellow had robbed of Honor, saw the act and heard the words, as he came down the orchid house, and noticed for the first time that Marian Murey, in her misty tulle of lavender satin and tulle, was really a most attractive person and most becomingly dressed. He knew that Marian had little or nothing of her own except her mother's jewels, and that it was owing to Honor's determined insistence that she had everything as if she were a daughter of the house, and it only made Honor seem more charming still. How well that young woman would spend a big income, with what generosity, what nobility!

As for Ted, when Honor had finished that dance he was awaiting her. And what took place out in the grand hall where two people sat on the pedestal of the Psyche and Ero's group, in the broad glare of the candles, one opening and shutting her fan, the other leaning toward her eagerly and taking the fan into his own hands at last, all the world might see, but only two of all the world might know.

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.

With the changing season it is prudent for all to rectify any ailment, curing them; but it is incumbent on the aged, suffering under ulcerations and similar debilitating causes to have them removed or worse consequences will follow. This Ointment is the remedy; on its powers all may confidently rely; it not only puts their sores out of sight, but extracts the source of mischief, extracts the corroding poison, and stimulates nature to fill up the ulcer with sound, healthy granulations, that will abide through a life. To cure this treatment has less soon to be removed, scurvy skin cast off their scales, and venereal sores cease to annoy. Such hope for the disease was unknown in former days.

GOSFORD, I.

Aug. 11th, 1890.

My neighbors and stockmen often asked me in regard to the New York Rock Lump Salt. I answer them that I have used the New York Rock Lump Salt for the past three years for my cattle, horses, sheep and hogs, and I can say that I have no use for barrel salt for my stock. Experience will satisfy any stockman that the New York Rock Lump Salt is far better for all kinds of stock. Men in my neighborhood who began using by buying 100 lbs. are now buying in lots of 500, 1,000 and 2,000 lbs. I consider it just as cheap at $1.00 per hundred, as barrel salt at $1.00 per barrel. Stock will not scour as they do when using the common salt, and I am of the opinion that it is only a question of time when it will be in common use.

Very respectfully yours,
JOHN WELCH.

A BLOODTHIRSTY BROOD

SOME KILLED AND MANY ARE BADLY WOUNDED.

A Row in Kentucky That Should Make Daniel Boone Wish Himself Back from the Happy Hunting Grounds For a Few Minutes.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Jan. 4.—The bloodiest fight in Magoffin County history took place yesterday about one mile from Sellersville.
There were 8 or 10 of the county's best known citizens engaged on each side, armed with repeating rifles and navy pistols.
The trouble, which had its inception in a trivial matter the day before, culminated in a pitched battle.

John Davis was killed by a pistol shot;
W. F. Desking, constable, was fatally wounded.

Monteville Desking, justice of the peace, has not been found since the fight, but he left a bloody trail on the snow through a woodland near the scene of the tragedy and is supposed to be fatally wounded.

Shepherd Cole, coroner of the county, received some fearful blows with a club and may die.

Bryce Patrick was shot through the bowels and is reported to be dying.

W. T. Patrick received a rifle ball along the right side of his head, but may recover.

Reports as to who was immediately responsible for the terrible affair are conflicting and it is not even known who fired the fatal shots. Dug. Risner and Samuel Risner were brought here this morning by Coroner Cole, charged with assault on W. T. Desking. The coroner made a guard of the persons who were identified with the prosecution, and for whose protection the warrant was issued. This was resented by the friends of the prisoners and both sides came to town heavily armed.

The prisoners were arraigned before Police Judge George H. Gardner, and the commonwealth not being ready for trial
they were released under bonds.

Some loud talking on the part of one of the Risners very nearly precipitated a fight in town about 2 o'clock, but prompt interference of the authorities prevented it.
The fight took place an hour later. No arrests have been made, and it is feared that another fight is imminent.

DR. M'GLYNN'S NOTE.

AN OTTAWA DETECTIVE

Takes a Short Cut to the Happy Hunting Grounds.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—The dead body of Detective Harry Montgomery, swinging from a crossbar in his own back kitchen, with his feet almost touching the floor, a small cord, about the size generally used around tea chests when imported, around his neck, and a chair standing close by, was the scene which met the brother-in-law of the dead man early this morning.

It was, without doubt, a case of carefully-premeditated self-destruction. He was seen late last evening and seemed to be sober, but was drinking considerably for some time past.

He was for years connected with the police force, being raised to the position of detective, which he also filled for several years, until discharged about a year ago, owing to inattention to duty through drink. He was, however, doing fairly well, attending to private cases since that time, and his having suicided cannot be attributed to any financial troubles or a case of want.

Yesterday he was busy all day electioneering and not having, been seen in the morning nor having been in his house all night, his brother-in-law set out to look for him, finding him as already mentioned.
He leaves a widow and three of a family.

The house in which he lived was his own, being given to him by his mother. His father is a saddler in Rideau-street, and is worth from $40,000 to $50,000. Recently it is said that the father changed his will, which was made unfavorable to Harry, who formerly was his favorite son and would come in for most of his money, which was to be divided between his three sons. Harry, who was about 45 years of age, was well known all over Ontario and was popular and respected here. An inquest is now being held. He was connected with many important cases and did good work as a detective.

The chair which stood by the body had been used to stand on so as to adjust the rope and afterwards jump down when all was ready. It was a case of strangulation.

FIGHT WITH DERVISHES.

EGYPTIAN TROOPS ARE HAVING A LIVELY CAMPAIGN.

Captain Pyne of the British Staff Among the Killed—The Dervishes Were Repulsed With Heavy Loss—45 Egyptians and an Officer Killed.

CAIRO, Jan. 4.—The body of dervishes which recently attacked Gemai, near Wady-Halfa, was overtaken near Ambigot yesterday by a detachment of Egyptian cavalry and a fierce battle ensued.

The dervishes, who greatly outnumbered the Egyptians, made several furious onslaughts on the Government troops, but were finally repulsed with heavy loss.
Many dervishes were slain.

Capt. Pyne of the British staff and 45
Egyptians, including an officer, were killed and many others were wounded.

A detachment of Egyptian cavalry with British officers have arrived at Ambigot since the battle took place, and further reinforcements have been despatched to the scene of the conflict.

COLD IN AUSTRIA.

Piled Ten or Twelve Feet High in Vienna
City.

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—Violent snow storms have prevailed throughout Austria and Hungary all day. All kinds of traffic have been impeded and scores of villages have been completely isolated. All the Imperial shooting parties in Styria have been postponed indefinitely.

A despatch from Trieste says that all traffic in the city has been stopped by the drifts.

In this city the snow is piled 10 or 12
feet high between the roads and sidewalks.
No market men have been able to come to town, and there is a great dearth of all farm products. A milk and butter famine has already been proclaimed by the produce dealers.

Pity His Wife, Too.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A despatch from Boulogne tells a curious story of a French soldier captured in the war of 1870 and repeatedly re-imprisoned for attempting to escape. He was released but a few days ago and reached Boulogne yesterday, to find his wife married again and the mother of several children by her second husband.

NEW YORK LIFE BUILDING, Montreal, Can.

Vindicating His Policy Did Not Reach the Vatican.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The Herald yesterday morning says: Dr. McGlynn has been welcomed back into the fold of the Catholic Church simply because the Pope considered that injustice was done him when he was excommunicated.
Archbishop Corrigan charges against Dr. McGlynn disobedience and preaching false doctrines. The doctrines have not been acted upon at all by Mgr. Satolli in restoring Dr. McGlynn to his full powers as a priest.
These charges will hang over the head of Dr. McGlynn, but it is extremely doubtful if they will ever be pushed. The case will probably never be reopened. Dr. McGlynn was excommunicated for "contumacy," in not having gone to Rome when summoned by the Pope to answer the charges made against him by Archbishop Corrigan.
He was excommunicated because a letter which he despatched to the Pope after receiving the cablegram from him ordering him to Rome within 40 days was "suppressed" before it reached its destination.
An ecclesiastic who occupies a high position in this archdiocese says had this letter reached the Pope it was said Dr. McGlynn would not have been excommunicated. Dr. McGlynn did not know that this letter had miscarried, and was surprised at the end of 40 days to find himself excommunicated.

BECAME A THIEF

Because She Wanted to Fit Herself for a Professional Nurse.
NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The story of the larceny of the jewels and wearing apparel from the Princess Maria Ruspoli, wife of Prince Ruspoli of the Italian legation at Washington, came out at the Tombs Police Court, where Miss Kate Sheridan, alias Miss Catherine Rickart, was arraigned.
A warrant was sworn out in Washington for her arrest, and a detective from there came here to see about the woman's extradition. For six months the woman had been the Princess Ruspoli's confidential maid, living with the family last summer at Lenox, Mass., and later near Lakewood, N.J. On Dec. 10, while the family was in Washington, the maid disappeared, taking with her about $2000 worth of her mistress' jewelry and clothing.
Last Saturday Miss Rickart was arrested. She told the detectives she had been a nurse at Blackwell's Island for a year, and it was because she wished to fit herself for the profession of a nurse that she committed the theft. She agreed to return to Washington without extradition proceedings.

He Shot the Barkeeper and His Wife and Then Blew Out His Own Brain.
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Antoine Duarte, a Portuguese keeper of the wayside resort near San Leandro, yesterday, while suffering from delirium tremens, went to the room of Anton Dias, his barkeeper, whom he called upon to open the door.
As Dias complied with the request Duarte shot at him. The pistol ball passed through Dias' shoulder, inflicting a serious injury.
Duarte then rushed into the room, firing two shots at Mrs. Dias, both passing through the chest.
Duarte then left the room and went down stairs into the billiard room, where he placed the weapon to his own head, blowing out his brains. Mrs. Dias will die.

THE BLUE LAW.

Supreme Court at Philadelphia Decides Against Sunday Papers.
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—Among the decisions handed down by the Supreme Court to-day was one confirming the legality of the old blue law of 1794 in relation to the publication of Sunday newspapers. The case upon which the decision was rendered was that of Thomas Matthews, publisher of The Pittsburg Sunday Leader.
Mr. Matthews was convicted of publishing and issuing his paper on Sunday, Dec. 27, 1891, under the act of 1794, which prohibits worldly pursuits for the Sabbath, save those that are an absolute necessity for the wants of the community.
The court says that the framers of the act of 1794 could not foresee the growth of newspapers or that they would possibly have exempted them under the provisions of the act.
The court in conclusion commends the act, but says that a too liberal enforcement of its provisions may lead to its repeal.

A Fierce Battle.

BURGOS AYRES, Jan. 3.—The Federal Government sent a commissioner to Corrientes a few days ago to mediate between the insurgents and the regularly constituted authorities of the province. The commissioner failed, however, in his efforts to bring about a cessation of hostilities. The two sides massed their forces and a fierce battle was fought, the result of which is not yet known here.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Mr. Gladstone has sent out a card expressing his gratitude to his friends throughout the world who sent him congratulatory letters and telegrams on his birthday. Sir John Abbott's Health.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Recent reports show that ex-Premier Abbott's health is far from good. He is now in Italy, journeying south by easy stages. He has made no gain in strength since his arrival in Europe; on the contrary, if anything, he is weaker. He still hopes, however, to benefit materially by further rest in the south.

THE FRENCH CABINET.

Rumors of Disagreement Said to be Without Foundation.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Magistrate Franqueville's examination of MM. Charles de Lesseps, Marius Fontaines, Sans-Leroy and Felix Cottu, who are charged with being implicated in the Panama Canal corruption, was finished on Saturday.

The case of the deputies charged with having received money from the Panama Canal Company was opened by Magistrate Franqueville yesterday. The accused are Jules Roche, ex-Minister of Commerce; Maurice Rouvier, ex-Minister of Finance; Emmanuel Arene, member from Corsica; Baron Jean de Soubeyran, member from Vienne; Antonin Proust, member from Deux Severs, and Joseph Dugue de La Fanconnerie, member from Orne.

There is no reason to believe that any more deputies are implicated in the Panama Canal scandals, and therefore no more arrests are expected.

M. Charles Floquet this evening authorized the correspondent of the International Telegram Company to deny the truth of reports that he intended to resign the presidency of the Chambers. The statement that he had even helped a Russian statesman to obtain 500,000 francs from the Panama Company, M. Floquet said, was an unqualified falsehood got up by his enemies merely to blacken his reputation. M. Floquet added that to his certain knowledge the current rumors of disagreement in the Cabinet were without the slightest basis in fact.

BRIGANDS IN POLAND.

A Notorious Leader and His Followers Are Captured.

VIENNA, Jan. 4.—The authorities at Warsaw are excited over the spread of brigandage in Russian Poland. The province of Radom, adjoining Austrian Galicia, has recently been infested by a band of 20 brigands, led by a notorious robber chief, named Julian Voyte.

These robbers attacked the residence of a wealthy land owner, named Vetchkodovitch, slaughtered the live stock found on the place, and after plundering the house set it on fire. Vetchkodovitch succeeded in escaping. Some of his employees carried word of the outrage to the authorities, and on the following day a force of troops went in pursuit of the brigands and overtook the robbers in a forest, when a sharp fight occurred. The robbers made a fierce resistance and wounded several of the soldiers, but the

The mob is being augmented hourly and another battle is expected. The Whitson brothers, who are sentenced to be hanged Jan. 17, will be lynched if the mob gets inside the jail.

STRANGE ACCIDENT.

Lawyer McCoy Suffers Death in Earnest in an Amateur Performance.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—A party of about 50 friends assembled last night at the house of Sidney McCoy, a young lawyer, to watch the old year out and the new year in. The feature of the evening's entertainment was the production of a short play written by McCoy and performed by amateurs.

The plot of the play was the betrayal of a band of Russian Nihilists by one of their number. The Nihilists discover the traitress and condemn her to death. They decide by lot who shall perform the execution, and the number fell to the character portrayed by McCoy. Miss Grace King played the part of the traitress, who is given the choice of being killed or stabbing herself, and chooses the latter alternative.

McCoy handed Miss King a stout dagger that had been in his family for many years. In the play the girl, instead of killing herself, stabs her assigned executioner, and as Miss King received the knife she reached forward to touch McCoy on the breast with it. At the same instant McCoy started towards the girl, when she stumbled, and falling forward with the dagger in her hand drove it through McCoy's heart. McCoy staggered into the next room.

A severe conflict ensued, the baron aided by his servants and by peasants from the estate making a brave resistance to the banditti. Several persons were wounded on each side, but the bandits were repulsed. A number of land owners in the neighborhood of Zavada have had their residences sacked by brigands.

ABOUT THE UMBRIA.

The Cunard Company Vindicate the Action of the Gallia.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Cunard Company have issued an official statement of the Gallia-Umbria incident. In this statement Capt. Ferguson of the Gallia says that when his steamer approached the Umbria he saw a steamer lying in proximity to her, blowing off steam. The Umbria was lying like a duck in the water, and formed a perfect picture of security, while the Gallia was rolling heavily. On reading the signal, "shaft broken," Capt. Ferguson consulted with his chief engineer.

The latter officer was satisfied from the next signal, "Ready to proceed to-morrow," that the Umbria was in no danger whatever and that there were some weeks' more provisions aboard for all the passengers and crew. Captain Ferguson, the report continues, had to consider his own position, with the prospect of easterly weather leaving him an insufficient margin in his coal supply. Should he, it asks, have expended a considerable portion of his fuel in standing by the Umbria for one and possibly two days?

HOT SCOTCH WORK.

State Aid For Emigration Has Been Withdrawn.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The outgoing of Lord Salisbury's administration and the incoming of that of Mr. Gladstone has quite upset the policy and plans of state-aided emigration.

The Secretary for Scotland has intimated that there will be no further Crofter emigration to the Northwest under control of the state.

The British Columbia Crofter scheme is affected by this declaration, and as a consequence the Crofter company that proposed to establish a Crofter colony and provide the members with means for making a living, which would be to the mutual advantage of both the company and its settlers, is still unformed and the syndicate has been compelled to obtain an extension of time of one year for its formation.

asked for a doctor and then fell dead.

Miss King knew there had been an accident of some kind, but did not know that McCoy was killed. She was taken home, and afterwards on advice of friends gave herself up to the police. She was taken to the City Prison at 3 o'clock in the morning, and when she entered the prison she fainted and has since remained unconscious.

This morning McCoy's two brothers secured her release by giving bonds for $10,000 for her appearance. The girl was then taken home, but is still in a critical condition.

Miss King recently suffered from a sprained ankle and had been using crutches to walk with, but had laid them aside to practice the part in the play. As she made a motion to stab McCoy she rested her weight on the weak foot and it gave way and she fell forward.

A FARMER'S WEALTH.

It Caused Him to Be Roughly Treated by Masked Robbers.

WEST BRIDGEWATER, Mass., Jan. 4.—The house of Francis P. Dunbar, a prosperous farmer who lives near the Brookton line, was entered last night by two masked burglars. Dunbar is 74 and his wife 78 years old.

The couple were awakened from their sleep by the intruders, one of whom seized the old man by the throat and demanded to know where his money was concealed. The old man struggled to free himself, whereupon the burglar pounded him into insensibility with a club. His injuries will probably cause his death. Mrs. Dunbar, calling for help, was silenced by threats of bodily harm and she told the men that the money was in her husband's trousers pockets. The burglars secured some $50 from this garment and escaped.

The American Republic to Send Brainy Men to Visit Hawaii.

The scheme is a visit to the Hawaiian Islands to be taken by 15 Republicans and 15 Democrats of the House and seven Republicans and seven Democrats of the Senate, who are members of the present and will be members of the next Congress.

One of the chief reasons of the proposed trip is said to be a desire on the part of the United States Government to counteract the influence which Englishmen are exerting in the island to prevent and keep down American commerce.

New Firm.

With pleasure we announce a new firm of solicitors in town, Messrs. Morden & Euttan. Having had considerable business transactions with both gentlemen, we can confidently recommend the new firm. We wish them a prosperous career.

Sold Out.

Mr. L. E. Percy, of Newburgh, has sold his business to Mr. Ryan (late of the firm of Haydon & Ryan) and for the next few days the stock will be sold at a sacrifice. The stock must be largely reduced before Jan. 16th. Bargains will therefore be in order until then.

She Got the Diamond!

“I cannot accept your recommendation, Sir,” said a lady to a druggist, who wished to sell a package of inferior dye, instead of the reliable Diamond. “I have used the Diamond Dyes for years, and know from experience that they are the best; if you do not sell the Diamond, I must look elsewhere.” The lady got the Diamond Dye. If all ladies were as particular, there would be no failures in home dyeing.

An Old Napaneean Suicides.

A letter received this week by Mr. Ed. Douglass, of the Paisley House, from his brother Charley, who is now in Denver, Col., for his health, states that Mr. Fred. McDonald, son of Mr. Robert McDonald, former proprietor of the Tichborne House, committed suicide at that place on Thursday of last week, at 7.30 p.m., by shooting himself through the heart. No further particulars given in the letter.

The Boys.

Boys should always have some quick and sure remedy for sudden attacks of Cramps, Diarrhoea, or Dysentery, for a physician is not always near, and an hour's delay in cases of this kind often leads to serious results. Therefore parents should have on hand a supply of Perry Davis' Pain Killer, which is as efficacious as it is simple and harmless. Directions are with each bottle, and one dose rarely fails to bring relief to a sufferer for any bowel complaint. New Size 25c. Bottle, full 2 oz.

The Event of the Season.

On Friday evening the 13th of January there will be given in the Opera House, Napanee, the best entertainment of the season. The Y. P. A. of the W. M. Church has at great expense secured the services of Miss E. Pauline Johnson, the talented Indian elocutionist, who is so loudly spoken of by the press. They have also secured Mr. Geo. E. Fax, one of Canada's greatest humorists, who alone is sufficient to warrant a packed house. Everybody come. Popular prices. Plan now open at J. J. Berry's.

Died.

Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, relict of the late George I. Smith, died at the residence of her son-in-law, W. N. Doller, Esq., on Saturday last at the age of 84 years, of a complication of diseases and old age. She had only been confined to the house for the past two weeks, although very feeble for the past five years. Deceased was a daughter of the late Burger Huyok, of Adolphustown who are of U. E. Loyalists stock. Four daughters still survive her. They are Mrs. W. N. Doller, Mrs. James McCay, Mrs. John B. Doller, and Mrs. W. F. Hall. The funeral took place on Tuesday morning and was largely attended.

They Must not Die.

It is simply an outrage to let young people die who are attacked with pulmonary troubles and incipient consumption, when Miller's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil will save them. It should be shunted from the house tops that supposed incurable con-extraordinary preparation. The rebuilding process commences in the system the moment the Emulsion is taken. Fire.

On Sunday night last shortly after seven o'clock fire was discovered in the upper stories of the premises occupied by Hinch & Co's. The fire alarm was promptly sounded and the brigade was on the scene in a few minutes and had two streams of water playing on the flames. The fire originated in the room occupied by Mr. Max Fox, cutter for the firm. As there was no stove in the room the origin of the fire is clouded in mystery. It evidently started in a pile of cuttings from woollen goods which was piled against a wooden partition between the cutting and sewing rooms. Everything in Mr. Fox's room was almost completely destroyed and a large hole was burnt through the floor into the shop below. Mr. Henry Daoust and fireman Woodcock, both of the Gibbard Furniture Co., were among the first to ascend the ladders and apply the hose to the fire inside and both met with accidents, but not before the fire was under control. In breaking the glass Mr. Daoust had his right hand, the only one he now has, severely cut, and he is now unable to work. The stump of his other hand is also badly cut. Dr. Warner dressed the wounds. Mr. Woodcock was thrown from the ladder by the force of the water, but sustained no serious damage. The stock of Messrs. Hinch & Co. is valued at $40,000 and carries insurance in the different companies to the amount of $25,000 as follows: Fire Ins. Association, $5,000; Guardian Ins. Co's, $5,000; Lancashire Ins. Co's, $5,000; Quebec Ins. Co's, $5,000 and Hartford Ins. Co's, $4,000. Mr. Fox carries an insurance of $200 in the Phoenix. Mr. Fox visited the room about 2 o'clock on Sunday and smelt the smoke but supposed that it came from some sweepings which had been thrown in the stove a little while previous.

Address and Presentation.

To Miss Etta Harrison—
Teacher S. S. No. 13, Richmond—
Dear and beloved Teacher—As you are now about to take your departure from among us to a new field of labor, we your pupils deem this a fitting occasion to approach you with expressions of our admiration and gratitude for the fidelity, ability, and success with which you have directed our thoughts during the period of your stay with us, as our dear and beloved teacher. It is but a just acknowledgment to say that the gratifying success and efficiency to which the school has attained are largely due to the devotion and forbearance you have manifested toward us, and the enthusiasm and love which you have constantly manifested for your work have acted as an inspiration to us, to endeavor to imitate your noble example.

We venture to hope that the most precious fruit of your labor with us is the requisition of a greater knowledge of, and a deeper love for education, which we doubt not in the after time will bring home to us golden sheaves. We regret that at present it is not within our power to present you a testimonial more fully commensurate with your personal merits; and the value of your exertions in our behalf, but we trust you will kindly accept this present as but inadequately testifying to our appreciation of your faithful labors and our sincere affection for you personally, and we sincerely hope it may be our lot to meet you again in this place, and come under your tender and loving care, as in the past, but if it be so ordered that we never meet again as teacher and scholar we will ever cherish you in our hearts as a dear and beloved friend and one who with untiring efforts has ever striven to store our minds with golden thoughts. We regret to say that oft times with our thoughtless actions and childish pranks we have caused you many troubles, which we ought not to have done, but we trust that your kind and loving heart will forgive us all these.

Humbly praying that the blessing of Him, who maketh all rich and addeth no sorrow, may ever rest upon you and wishing you a Merry Xmas.

Signed on behalf of the school,
MARSHALL HUDSON.
Riverside, Dec. 24th, 1892.

Wedding Bells.

The rectory, Selby, was the scene of a happy event on Wednesday night last, the event being the marriage of Mr. Robt. W. McCormick, son of Mr. James McCormick, of Richmond, to Miss Margaret G., daughter of Mr. Abraham Winters, of Selby. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Atkinson, Incumbent. Mr. G. McCormick and Miss Lily Winters acted as groomsmen and bridesmaids respectively.

Feels Proud.

Dr. Leonard, the Mayor-elect, feels proud and justly so, of the honor done him on Monday last, and of the handsome majority by which he was elected. We feel assured that in return he will give the citizens the benefit of close attention to his duties and always advance the town's interests as much as possible. The doctor wishes to return his sincere thanks to his supporters.

Holloway's Pills.

This Medicine has resisted every test which time, prejudice, and vested interest could impose upon it, and it at length stands forth triumphant as the most reliable remedy for those derangements of the system so common at the change of seasons. When the air grows cooler, and the functions of the skin are retarded, an occasional dose of Holloway's Pills will call on the liver and kidneys for greater activity, and compensate the system for diminished cutaneous action. As alternatives, aperients, and tonics these Pills have no equal. To every aged and delicate person whose appetite is defective, digestion infirm, and tone of health low, this medicine will be a precious boon, conferring both ease and strength.

Accidents.

On Wednesday evening while tobogganing on the hill where the old toboggan slide used to be Miss Minnie Miller, daughter of Sidney Miller, was thrown from the toboggan through it striking a stone. Although confined to her room, nothing serious is anticipated.

Perry Wagar, a young lad working in the Gibbard Furniture factory, met with a serious accident one day last week. While doing some fast skating on the river he collided with another young lad, George Fields. Both sustained injuries, and Perry has been unable to go to work since. His jaw was almost broken.

Resolution of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Eastern Methodist Church, Napanee, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 3rd, it was moved by Mr. F. W. Vandusen, seconded by Mrs. J. Bogart, and resolved that "Whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst Maude Henderson, a young lady in the full vigor of youth and hopefulness, a beloved member of this society, whose many excellent qualities and commendable christian zeal in the work of our society we have learned to admire, while pursuing her studies in Napanee.

Resolved that we as a society place on record our sense of irreparable loss sustained in her untimely death, and express our heartfelt sympathy with the friends of the deceased in their sad bereavement.

Resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the bereaved friends, and the town papers for publication.

—All ages and conditions of people may use National Pills without injury and with great benefit.
